ADVERTISEMENT.

In presenting the first number of the Cambridge Almanac and Business Directory, we feel confident that we have not mistaken the wants of nearly every adult member of the community.

To the citizen it will be found a convenient book of reference as it contains information, not only of a local but general character.

To the stranger, it will serve as a guide to the business of Cambridge, and to the civil, Religious, Benevolent and other institutions of the city.

Much effort has been made, to render this number full and complete,—but errors and omissions are unavoidable in a work of this kind, especially in the compilation of the first number. Yet it is believed, this number is unusually free from them. Should this effort receive the patronage and favor of the public, the subsequent numbers, will appear enlarged and improved. Another year we shall probally connect with this work a general Directory, giving the residence of the citizens. This year we did not feel warrented in undertaking it. From inquiries and consultation with the citizens, we feel that such information is much wanted, and having this year overcome many of the difficulties consequent upon the first number, we shall be able in future to furnish a General Directory, at a moderate price.

For the information, and assistance rendered by several individuals, and the interest manifested by the citizens in general, the author feels much indebted.

The advertising department will be found useful as a guide to purchasers.

Please read, and remember them, whenever you have occasion to purchase.

Cambridge, Jan. 1, 1847.

Rates of Postage.

Letters weighing less than half an ounce, are charged 5 cents if under 300 miles : 10 cents if over that distance.—Letters weighing one oz. pay double price; every additional half ounce is to be charged additional single postage. Drop letters pay two cents; and letters advertised are to pay the cost of advertising.

A newspaper within thirty miles from the place where it is printed, is sent free of postage; over 30 miles and under 100 miles, one cent; over 100 miles, to any part of the United States one and a half cent.

CAMBRIDGE.

This town was incorporated by the name of "Newton," in 1630. It took the name of Cambridge in 1636. West Cambridge, incorporated in 1807, and Lexington incorporated in 1713, were formerly a part of the town. Brighton was also a part of Cambridge, called "Little Cambridge," until its incorporation in 1807. An act to establish this ancient town as a city, passed the Legislature, March 17, 1846, which act was soon after adopted by the people by a vote of 645 yeas to 224 nays.

Old Cambridge, is the seat of the oldest and best endowed college in the United State. This part of the city, situated about three miles from Boston, contains all the buildings belonging to the Univerisity, and abounds in splendid dwellings and highly cultivated fields and gardens.

Cambridgeport, contains seven Churches, a Bank, Insurance Office, &c.; also, the City Hall, and the several public offices for the transaction of municipal affairs. This section is about midway between Old Cambridge and Boston, and is quite a business place; and is in a high state of prosperity.

East Cambridge is a growing place, and contains several important manufactories; also, a Court House, Jail, and House of Correction.

Cambridge is very pleasant, although not so elevated as some of the neighboring towns. The soil is good, and cultivated with great taste and skill. There are extensive manufactories of soap, glass, cigars, rail road cars, &c., &c., affording business to a large number of persons. The first printing press in America was established here, by Stephen Day, in 1639. The first work printed was the "Freeman's Oath." During the year 1775, the head-quarters of the American army was in this town; and here Washington entered upon his duties as Commander-in-Chief. His quarters were at the Craigie House, near the Colleges. The Washington Elm, on the westerly side of the Common, is an object of interest, as under its branches Washington is said to have been stationed while his commission was proclaimed to the army.

POPULATION.

By the following statement it will appear that Cambridge is rapidly increasing in population:

| 1790 | 1800 | 1810 | 1820 | 1830 | 1840 | 1845 |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| 2,115 | 2,453 | 2,323 | 3,295 | 6,072 | 8,409 | 12,490 |

As early as 1636, the General Court appropriated £400 to the erection of a public school at Newtown, afterwards called Cambridge. What the General Court had contemplated, and partially provided for, the liberality of John Harvard, the worthy minister of Charlestown, who died in 1638, aided to accomplish. To the public school at Newtown, he left by will, £779 17s 2d, and by order of the Court, and in honor of its earliest benefactor, the school was named Harvard College, and the town called Cambridge, in memory of the place in England, at whose university several of the influential planters received their own education.

MOUNT AUBURN CEMETERY.

This hallowed spot lies about a mile west of the University, in the towns of Cambridge and Watertown. It contains about 100 acres of land, and is laid out with gravelled walks, and planted and embellished with all the varieties of trees, shrubbery and flowers. Numerous monuments of exquisite workmanship are here erected. It is an enchanting place—a magnificent resting-place of the dead.—This cemetery was dedicated September 24, 1831.

CHARLES RIVER.

Charles River rises on the borders of Hopkinton and Milford, and after meandering through Bellington, Franklin, Medway, Medfield, Sherburne, Dover, Dedham, Needham, Natick, Newton, Waltham, and Watertown, it meets the tide waters, and forms a part of Boston harbor. It is navigable to Watertown, seven miles west from Boston. At the present time, six bridges cross it from Cambridge and Charlestown, to the city of Boston. The first bridge, (Charles River bridge,) was opened for travel, June 17, 1786; before this time the passage was made in boats; or by land, through the towns of Brighton, Brookline, and Roxbury, over Boston neck.

New Seal for the City of Cambridge,

Upon the Cover and Title page of this book, can be seen impressions from this beautiful Seal, of which the following is the device :—" in the centre thereof, a shield, bearing upon it a view, in distant perspective, of Cambridge and Boston, united by a bridge; on the extreme left, the Towers of Gore Hall, and on the extreme right, the Dome of the State House, to indicate the two places ; under the shield, the inscription shall be 'Cantabrigia condita, A. D., 1630 ; Civico regimine donata, A. D., 1846.' Around the seal, as the city motto, shall be the words, 'Literis antiquis novis institutis decora.' "

In order that the citizens of Cambridge may have an opportunity of comparing their seal with that of their sister city, Roxbury, we here present it for their examination.

FRESH POND.

A part of this beautiful sheet of water lies in Cambridge. This pond is much visited during the spring and summer months, and in the winter immense quanties of ice are taken from it to Boston and other markets, over the Fresh Pond Rail Road, which extends from this pond to Charlestown.

---

Hayward's Massachusetts Gazetteer, is an excellent work, recently published, and should be owned by every family in the 'Old Bay State.' We are indebted to it for some of the facts contained in this book.

Rev. John Harvard came over to Massachusetts in 1637. He survived only one year after his arrival. He possessed a considerable estate—half of which he bequeathed to the Cambridge school. It is supposed Mr. Harvard left a widow, to whom he gave the rest of his estate: he left no children. The memory of Mr. Harvard was cherished by the people of Charlestown, as a man of piety and benevolence; and it must always be precious with the friends of learning and religion, in New England.

Hon. John Leverett was President of Harvard College from 1707 to 1724. He graduated at this institution in 1680, and was one of the most learned and accomplished men of the day. His probity was equally as conspicuous as his learning and talents. He died in 1724.

Adams' New Directory of the City of Boston,

The second number will be published on the first day of July, 1847. Besides a General Directory, it will contain an Almanac and Business Directory, with a large amount of miscellaneous matter. The subscriber feels confident, that with the experience he has had in compiling the first number, together with the Business Directory of the last number of the Boston Almanac, and the Roxbury and Cambridge Business Directories, he will be able to produce a Directory another year which cannot fail to prove satisfactory.—Having personally visited every business place in Boston, to obtain the necessary information for the Boston Almanac, and having prepared the same for the press, which has rendered the business, location and names of the inhabitants familiar to him, he does not hesitate to assure the public, that the next number of the New Directory will be as free from omissions or mistakes as is possible in a work of this kind.

The advertising department of the work, will be so arranged as to render it pleasant and interesting to the reader, and of great advantage to advertisers. Individuals engaged in business, particularly manufacturers in the vicinity of Boston, will find it an excellent medium for the circulation of their Cards.

GEO. ADAMS.

CAMBRIDGE ADVERTISEMENTS.

We would call particular attention to the Business Cards of the Cambridge Advertisers: purchasers should remember them when they have occasion for anything in the line of the various advertisers. Patronize your own townsmen, especially when you can do as well as to spend your money and time in visiting other markets.
